BIOGRAPHICAL/HISTORICAL NOTE

Joseph Plauche was an early twentieth century African American planter in Bayou Natchez near Natchez, Louisiana, in Natchitoches Parish. He rented his farmland from J. Lawrence Prudhomme, and Mrs. A. J. (Estelle) Plauche, who had moved to New York. The plantation was located about twelve miles from Natchitoches, La., on the west bank of the Cane River and about one mile southeast of Natchez, La. Among other activities, Plauche grew cotton and bred horses. He had at least one daughter, Queen. Plauche also employed a number of former soldiers, returning from World War I, as field hands.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Plantation account books, financial papers, printed items and graphic materials, and correspondence pertaining to early twentieth-century Louisiana farming. Manuscript volumes include ledgers, time books, and checkbooks. Financial papers are comprised of bills for merchandise, blacksmithing, and medical expenses; receipts for cattle, lumber, and farm equipment; bank statements, insurance policies, and federal income tax returns. Correspondence includes letters from banks relating to his accounts and a few personal letters from friends and family. Printed and graphic materials include advertisements, agricultural pamphlets, and a photograph, probably of Plauche himself.
