BIOGRAPHICAL/HISTORICAL NOTE

The Louisiana Division of the Arts is an agency within the Office of Cultural Development in the Louisiana Department of Culture, Recreation and Tourism. The Division of the Arts was created in 1977 to support established and individual artists and to stimulate public participation in the arts in Louisiana. The Division administers state and federal funds appropriated for arts grants in Louisiana through three principal mechanisms: the Statewide Arts Grants Program, the Louisiana Decentralized Arts Funding Program and Special Initiatives. The Division awards approximately $4 million in grants each year to Louisiana artists and non-profit organizations. Its programs encourage the expansion of audiences and stimulate public participation in the arts in Louisiana. The Louisiana Folklife Program is one of the programs of the Division of the Arts.

The mandate of the Louisiana Folklife Program is to identify, document, preserve, and present Louisiana's traditional cultures. Over the past 20 years, the Program has developed numerous projects and programs to implement this mandate. Its history can be highlighted by taking note of the accomplishments of the three individuals who have held the position of Director since 1979.

The first director of the Program, Nicholas Spitzer (1979-1985) compiled the baseline research presented in Louisiana Folklife: A Guide to the State, assisted with four albums in the Louisiana Folklife Recording Series, had The Creole State: An Exhibition of Louisiana Folklife permanently installed in the State Capitol, and initiated the Louisiana Folklife Festival at the 1984 World's Fair. He also started the statewide Louisiana Folklife Survey grew out of the Florida Parishes Folklife Project. The Florida Parishes Folklife Project, an ambitious seven-year project included a conference, survey, exhibit, festival, and publication.

Robert Gates, the second director (1986-1988), expanded the Apprenticeship Program, initiated the Delta Parishes Survey (northeast Louisiana), and coordinated the folklife component of the temporary exhibit, 1988 Annual Made in the Shade Exhibit in conjunction with the Louisiana Crafts Council. He also moved the Louisiana Folklife Festival from Baton Rouge to Eunice in 1988 when the city of Baton Rouge was no longer able to support it.

Maida Owens (Bergeron), the third and current director of the Louisiana Folklife Program, was appointed as the director in 1989. One of her first tasks was to determine a way for the Louisiana Folklife Festival to survive. Increasingly, the Louisiana Folklife Program was less involved in the festival. The Program started to initiate fieldwork to be presented at the festival and to provide technical assistance regarding programming and the interpretive booklet. The community then became responsible for producing the festival and hiring a folklorist to program it. This created a new partnership each year between a community and the Folklife Program. After being held in New Orleans (1984), Baton Rouge (1985-87), Eunice (1988-89, 1991) and Kenner (1990), the City of Monroe now hosts the festival. While continuing the existing programs, Maida Owens (Bergeron) initiated several new ones: for example, the Open House Storytelling Program 1990 resulted in the publication of a book Swapping Stories: Folktales from Louisiana (1997) where she was co-editor. Also Maida Owens served as co-producer/researcher of the book companion video program (1997). A website with the same title was also established. The Louisiana Folklife Survey became an ongoing project to document traditional artists and communities with special focus on regions not previously documented. Also a map, Louisiana Folk Regions, showing the major subregions and ethnic groups in Louisiana was compiled by Maida Owens based on Spitzer, Kniffen, Knipmeyer, Newton, Gregory, and Roach, with cartography by Greg Wirth. Louisiana Folklife Recording Series (LFRS) developed into a program that documents traditional musicians and storytellers otherwise unlikely to be recorded by commercial labels such as African-American work songs, old time Cajun and country music. Maida Owens was a curator for the renovation of The Creole State: An Exhibition of Louisiana Folklife (1995) permanently located in the State Capitol, edited the publication Fait a la Main: A Sourcebook of Louisiana Crafts (1988), co-edited Keeping It Alive: Cultural Conservation Through Apprenticeship, A Review of the Louisiana Apprenticeship Program (1993). She also served as assistant producer and researcher for the video documentary Dance for a Chicken: The Cajun Mardi Gras (1993).

While these projects represent the highlights of the initiatives undertaken in the past 20 years, the attached "History of the Louisiana Folklife Program 1977-1991" provides a more detailed description. This description is based on the Minutes of the Louisiana Folklife Commission Meetings and other collection documents.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Louisiana Folklife Program Project files collection includes correspondence, financial documents and papers, grant drafts and completed applications, minutes and other materials of the Folklife Commission and Lower Mississippi Delta Development Commission, correspondence, documentation, and related oral history recordings of various folklife projects and festivals (the latter primarily related to the Louisiana Folklife Festival), correspondence related to and drafts of Folklife Program publications (Louisiana Folklife Guide, Swapping Stories files), printed materials, newspaper clippings, posters, photographs, videos spanning 1979 to 1996 documenting the creation, development and work on different projects of the Louisiana Folklife Program, Division of the Arts.

The correspondence discusses development of the Folklife Program; initiation and development of different folklife projects and folklife festivals; grant applications; financial and personnel matters. There is correspondence with the Governor and Senators and National Endowment for the Arts; and reading files. The bulk of the correspondence is that of the three Folklife Program directors: Nick Spitzer, Bob Gates, and Maida Owens Bergeron.

Included is Folklife Commission correspondence, minutes of meetings, bylaws spanning 1982-1991. Folklife Program, Division of the Arts official correspondence, goals of the Division, folklife plan of the State of Louisiana, proposal for Louisiana Folklife Program 1984-1985. ## APPENDIX A: HISTORY OF LA FOLKLIFE PROGRAM

History of Louisiana Folklife Program, 1977-1991

The Louisiana Division of the Arts was created in 1977 to support established and individual artists and to stimulate public participation in the arts in Louisiana. The Folklife Program was first proposed at a 1977 meeting of folklorists from around the state. In the same year an advisory committee on Folk Arts recommended that the Division of the Arts hire a folk arts coordinator to address the area of folk arts and folklife. So Nicholas Spitzer was hired as a first state folklorist in 1978. A folklife conference was held in 1979 which helped to further build the constituency, develop strategies for preserving Louisiana folklife, and develop networks of communications. Activity in small communities began to be encouraged by many folklorists in the field.

A Folk Arts panel was created in the Division of the Arts, which was responsible for reviewing and making recommendation on folk arts grants.

A folklife recording series, among many other projects, was initiated. A folklife resource directory – Louisiana Folklife: A Guide to the State – was another project at that time. Another folklife conference took place in May 1981.

In 1981 the Folk Arts Program of the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) gave Louisiana a grant for $39,382.00 for the purpose of establishing a folklife program. In the fall of 1981 the Department of Culture, Recreation and Tourism, Office of Program Development submitted a request for authorization to receive the federal monies and set up a new Division of Folklife in the Office. Since the Division of Administration had not approved a Division of Folklife, this money was channeled in 1982 through the budget of the Division of the Arts for the purpose of establishing a Folklife Program internally within the department to utilize the federal grant.

The NEA support the position of Folklife Coordinator for four years. In 1981 the position title changed from Folk Arts Coordinator to Folk Life Program Manager, reflecting the thinking that “folk arts “ was too limited term and “folklife” was more all-encompassing in terms of folk culture as a whole in Louisiana.

In 1982 the Louisiana Folklife Commission was established. The legislation that describes the Louisiana Folklife Commission, its purpose and functions, its creation, membership, confirmation, and reconfirmation, terms, officers, vacancies, etc. was House Bill no. 1397 (Regular Session, 1982). The first meeting of the Louisiana Folklife Commission, appointed by Governor Treen in mid-December, was held in the Office of Program Development of the Department of Culture, Recreation and Tourism on Monday February 1, 1982. During the second Commission meeting on May 10, 1982, Dr. Frank A. deCaro was nominated for the office of Chairman, and Dr. H. F. Gregory was nominated for the office of Vice Chairman.

In 1982 Nicholas Spitzer contacted various people and organizations throughout the state regarding the Louisiana World’s Fair to be held in New Orleans later that year. The Louisiana Folklife Commission planned to present a joint resolution with the Mississippi Delta Preservation Commission to the planning committee of the World's Fair urging the incorporation of folklife into the fair activities. At that time the Commission wanted to establish the Louisiana Friends of Folklife, a small group of 10 to 12 people that had a sincere interest in folklife and were also politically influential. The Commission believed that this group should not exist solely for political purposes, but also to encourage and develop an interest in the folklife of their own particular communities.

Current and Future Projects that the Folklife Program worked on in 1982 included:

- Folklife Recording Series (the "Hezekiah and the House Rockers" LP was one of the first records);
- Gathering materials for the State Guide;
- Plan of folklife activities in north Louisiana and the Florida Parishes was initiated; and gathering material for the Octa Clark album had also been finished.

In 1983 the Louisiana State Museum in cooperation with the architectural firm McNaughton and Associates recommended that the Old State House building be renovated to be used as a Folklife Center. The Folklife Commission was asked to make a contribution towards the development of this proposal.

Under the direction of Joel Gardner, the Folklife Program started the Florida Parishes Folklife Project. This project was developed as a National Endowment for the Arts grant designed to send field workers out to research the folklife of an area in Louisiana not generally well known and to collect information about folk arts and artists in the eight Florida Parishes (Washington, St. Tammany, Tangipahoa, the East and West Feliciana Parishes, St. Helena, East Baton Rouge and Livingston Parishes). The project took place in several phases, the first of which was a conference in Hammond in March of 1983 funded by the Louisiana Committee for the Humanities, which laid the ground work for the research needed. The Louisiana Folklife Survey was developed as the next phase in the implementation of the Florida Parishes Folklife Project. A double-sided Survey page was designed as a basic form for use by statewide organization and institutions with the possibility to accommodate oral history as well. The form focused on the location and identification of human resources and was planned to serve as a "directory" for folk art forms, artifacts, and artists that would enable folklorists to keep tracks of folk art throughout the state without removing the arts forms from their points of origin. The process of locating field workers for the Florida Parishes Folklife Projects started at the end of 1983. The field workers' main task was to locate resources; gather tapes, photographs, and documents; and compile a final 15-20 page report. Finally, these reports would be used for a publication. This second part was funded by the NEA. Twelve people were selected to work, each representing a different subjects, ethnic group, or area.

During 1983, the Folklife Program continued to work on the Louisiana Folklife Recording Series project that was initiated as an attempt to record music which was not produced commercially. As a result, four albums and booklets were completed and sent to libraries, public radios, archives, etc. The first album was "Cornbread for your Husband, Biscuits for Your Man: Mr. Clifford Blake Sr. Calls the Cotton Press," which was widely acclaimed throughout the country and was field recorded by Nicholas Spitzer and Don Hatley, folklorist at Northwestern State University in Natchitoches. The second album was "The North Louisiana String Band," a group that Lankford put together for the first folk arts conference in 1979, and was recorded by Don Hatley. The third album was recorded by Nicholas Spitzer at Northwestern during the Natchitoches Folk Festival, "Since Ol' Gabriel's Time, Hezekiah and the House Rockers." This group has been invited to the National Blues Festival in Atlanta, traveled to Amsterdam to perform, and had been a focus of attention in the blues community worldwide. The fourth album was produced on a commercial label, Rounder Records, by Spitzer and Barry Ancelet, entitled, "Ensemble Encore, Octa Clark and Hector Duhon, The Dixie Ramblers," which features old time Cajun music on accordion and fiddle. Future plans for the Series included an album of Brownie Ford from Caldwell Parish and an album of Spanish songs/stories from St. Bernard Parish.

At the end of 1983, approximately 98 percent of the folklife guide was submitted to the printer. The Program planned a book that would contain 350 pages. During 1982-1983 the Folklife Guide developed into a bigger publication with more photographs and written material than was originally planned.

A separate program area was designed specifically for the Folklife Program in 1983 to reflect a change in the practice of the previous five years when folklife projects developed under the Project Assistance category.

The state plan for folklife was developed as a fundamental policy statement, flexible and open-ended to allow modification and expansion. The plan defined what folklife is and how the state should be involved. The plan also included the benefits and methods of folklife planning, past activities, cultural preservation, documentation, and planned activities for 1983-1986.

Also, the preparation for the 1984 Folklife Festival at the World's Fair continued under the direction of Jane Bergey.

In 1984 the Folklife Program was not supported by the Division of Administration, so it faced a similar situation with the Legislature. The program again applied to NEA for funds for the Folklife Program Manager position to be continued.

The vision and philosophy of the Folklife Program as stated by Nicholas Spitzer centered not only around artifacts and performances but also around the totality of folk culture and the lives of the people involved.

In 1984 the work on the Florida Parishes Project continued. The results of the field workers' work were 12 reports covering the region and a remarkable archive of materials, forms, photos, and tapes. Between 200 and 300 survey forms were returned. Maida Owens (Bergeron), who was working with the Folklife Program, organized and catalogued the information obtained from the survey forms as well as the tapes and other materials turned in from the Florida Parishes Folklife Survey. Plans included to complete the project by producing out a catalogue of what was found. During the course of the project, DOA gave a grant to the Hammond Cultural Center and Southeastern University to put on a crafts and music festival in Hammond based on the Florida Parishes Project. The crafts exhibit, designed by Jeskin and Linge (World's Fair Folklife Festival designers) was highly successful. The project formed a framework for future projects of the same nature.

Also in 1984 the North Central Louisiana Folklife Survey was started under the direction of Susan Roach Lankford. In cooperation with the English Department at Louisiana Tech in Ruston she applied to DOA and LCH for funds to begin a field study. The study pursued music, verbal arts, and occupational and material arts, all coming from the region itself and connected to the people who and settled there. Over 150 interviews, report forms, and tapes were gathered. An exhibit was held in September and October at the Tech Art Gallery. The exhibit was coordinated to take place together with the Ruston Centennial Heritage Day on October 6.

The Louisiana Folklife Festival at the World's Fair developed into a showcase for the best Louisiana folk culture traditions – a place where people could come to see Mardi Gras Indians and hear blues and Cajun music. Inspired by the interest in the 1983 Smithsonian Folklife Festival, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Long went to the timber industries and obtained over a half a million dollars in support of the Festival. The Festival was very successful and received favorable reviews in national publications such as Newsweek, despite difficult relationships with the World's Fair. The success of the Festival stimulated interest in a statewide folk festival. The folklife Program planned to schedule a statewide festival that would not coincide with other folk festivals around the state. The Arts and Humanities Council of Baton Rouge was asked by the Mayor to put on a cultural festival to along with the National Sports Festival in July of 1985. So it was planned that for its first year the Folklife Festival would be held in Baton Rouge by the river, a two-day, five night event in conjunction with the Sports Festival.

The Folklife Exhibit at the World's Fair – The Creole State: An Exhibit of Louisiana Folklife – was the first statewide exhibit of contemporary folk culture and included everything from tombstones to ax handles, from Mardi Gras costumes to Cajun accordions. The plan was install the exhibit afterwards in the Capitol. The timber industry was asked to give an additional 10% of the original $100,000 per-corporation contribution, stating the need for about $50,000 to install the exhibit and make it a semi-permanent structure.

The publication of the Folklife Guide, as a series of essays and articles encompassing the many areas of Louisiana folk culture to serve as valuable resource and reference tool in terms of approaching the legislature and general advocacy efforts, was planned to be completed in 1985.

At the end of 1984 new members were appointed to the Louisiana Folklife Commission. At the December 4, 1984 meeting Barry Ancelet was nominated as chairman of the Louisiana Folklife Commission, and Susan Lankford had been nominated as vice chairman of the commission.

In 1985 the Folklife Program started to computerize its operations by forming an information database for folk artists and organizations in Louisiana.

The Folk Arts Panel, selected by the DOA staff to make recommendations on folk arts grants proposals to DOA, continued to represent as much as possible a professional as well as geographic distribution. The projects founded by the Folk Arts Panel included documentation or promotion of traditional folk culture – booklets for communities, lesser known performers, exhibits, festivals, etc.

New Folklife Program activities included closer cooperation on Folklife Programming with the Jean Lafitte National Historical Park Service, established in 1978 with the mission to preserve, perpetuate, and interpret the cultural diversity of the Mississippi Delta region. The establishment of the Isleno Museum in St. Bernard was an example of the Park's involvement with communities regarding interpretation and presentation of ethnic groups.

North Louisiana Activities included the first folklife-oriented festival in the Bossier City area in May, 1985- a "Grassroots Festival," sponsored by the Grassroots Society and the Southern Songwriters Guild, with folk and bluegrass music and writers.

Also in 1985 The Smithsonian Institution's proposed themes for its folklife festival included Indian and Black culture of New Orleans as part of a continuing focus on urban Black culture. In late December 1984 it was proposed that all areas of the state be represented at the Smithsonian Folklife Festival. Noelle LeBlanc, Secretary of the Department of Culture, Recreation and Tourism, responded favorable to the proposal, noting that the department would welcome such positive attention to the state. The Smithsonian named Ms. Allison Kaslow and Ms. Joyce Jackson as coordinators.

Jane Grogby-Bergey, former director of the Folklife Festival at the World's Fair 1984, was hired as Festival Director for the Louisiana Folklife Festival. Some federal money was applied for the NEA and matched by the Arts and Humanities Council of Baton Rouge. Also the Folklife Program decided to use the 1985 Louisiana Folklife Festival to establish criteria for the future festival site selection procedure.

During 1985 Louisiana folk culture was successfully presented at the Smithsonian's Festival of American Folklife in June-July, and at the Louisiana Folklife Festival in Baton Rouge in July-August. Unfortunately the Legislature failed to support the Folklife Program. Nicholas Spitzer departed as program manager to take a position with the Smithsonian in October 1985. The Folklife Program was un-staffed until March 1986 when Maida Owens (Bergeron) was temporarily appointed as program manager. The folklife manager position was temporarily eliminated during the budget cuts and hiring freeze, but the Office of Cultural Development was able to save the folklife manager position. This position became a civil service position, state funded with a proposed grant to NEA to supplement the salary.

In 1986 the Cultural Outreach Project was organized by the Office of Tourism as an interagency project to promote tourism and Louisiana interests in selected markets. The 1986 thrust targeted Austin, Dallas, and Houston and took place in April, 1986.

One of the folklife program areas that during that period was Arts in Education Residencies. The Louisiana Folklife Commission underlined that this programming area should be developed more in the future since the school systems would need to understand how to best utilize folklife as an educational resource.

Also in the spring of 1986 the Louisiana Folklife: A Guide to the State project entered its final phase of printing and distribution.

The NEA approved in full a part-time position for one year starting on June 1, 1986 to computerize the Louisiana Folklife Survey data. The Southern Arts Federation wrote the computer program to complete this project.

Also the NEA approved in full a grant for $13, 150 to install the Creole State exhibit and purchase artifacts. The Alexandria Museum declined to give a permanent loan to the Louisiana Folklife Program for their folk arts collection in the exhibit, so a periodic renewal became necessary. Maida Owens (Bergeron) worked on preparation of a teacher's guide to the Creole State Exhibit to be used for fieldtrips

In 1986 the Louisiana Folklife Recording Series project continued with the publication of the Lomax recordings on Swallow Records as a two album set with a large booklet including all transcriptions, translations, and extensive notes, that could be used easily as a teaching resource. Also the process of reissuing the LFRS and several publications was started.

In 1986 the River City Festival applied for an NEA grant to add a folklife component to their Fall Crafts Festival, October 17-19, 1986. The Office of Cultural Development permitted them to use the copyrighted name, "Louisiana Folklife Festival" for 1986 under the condition that the Louisiana Folklife Festival Board provide programming guidance and that they hire a folklorist to coordinate it. Because the Folklife Program was not staffed for five months, they had to organize the festival very quickly in order to apply for the NEA grant by April 1, 1986. The Louisiana Folklife Board, an ad hoc committee, consisted of the River City Festivals Director Rick Sabino, the Louisiana Folklife Program manager Barry Ancelet, Susan Roach-Lankford, and Peter Gregory. The Louisiana Folklife Commission was directly involved with the planning of the 1986 festival.

During the summer 1986 Robert (Bob) Gates became the new Folklife Program manager. The Folklife Program continued to work on its projects. During September 1986 the 800 copies of Louisiana Folklife: A Guide to the State were distributed and received positive responses. Negotiations with the LSU Press for reprinting the Guide were underway. As originally planned, the distribution of the Guide was finished and consideration given to maintain public access to the Guide.

The Folklife Program decided to increase the quantity of apprenticeships with the help of applying for the NEA grant. In previous years apprenticeship grants had been of high quality, but they had only reached a few folk artists.

The Folklife Program placed a greater emphasis on the Folk Arts in the School Program. The Division of the Arts and the State Arts Council identified Arts in Education as an area of great importance to develop not only the arts but the folklife of the state as well.

The Florida Parishes Program material was received and the Delta Survey was considered.

The idea of reissuing or continuing the recording series was developed with a plan to present folklife music on the NPR station, WRKS of Baton Rouge.

The main objectives of the Folklife Program highlighted at the time were to:

- 1) Develop a strong folk artist apprenticeship program
- 2) Promote the study of folklife in the schools
- 3) Work closely with Office of Culture, Recreation and Tourism to promote public awareness of Louisiana Folklife
- 4) Provide technical services to the field
- 5) Develop a working folklife resource archive of tapes, photos, survey forms, and artifacts
- 6) Develop a strong working relationship with the Louisiana Endowment for the Humanities
- 7) Continue interpreting the state's folklife through media projects
- 8) Develop a statewide newsletter about folklife research and activities

At the end of 1986 and the beginning of 1987, the Division of the Arts started a separate program that focused on the traditional crafts.

In 1987, the manager of Louisiana Folklife Program, Robert (Bob) Gates, worked with a museum in Bowling Green, Kentucky on an exhibit about the folklife of families who worked with tobacco. Materials for the Louisiana component were provided: pictures, interviews, and artifacts. The exhibit was very well received. Also, work on the Folklife Recording Series continued with new recordings and publications.

With the Louisiana Folklife Festival, problems developed with the River Cities Commission and they dropped the Festival after applying for an NEA grant. Also the Louisiana Folklife Commission suggested separating the Festival from the Crafts Festival. Gates decided to apply for DOA assistance to produce the Folklife Festival in 1987 and to have it in Baton Rouge but to move it around the state in future years to increase awareness.

In 1989 the main problem was to redefine and improve the work of taking care of living culture in Jean Laffite National Historical Park. Other problems included the show at the Liberty Theater at Eunice and evaluation of the mechanism of work of the Delta Preservation Commission.

In December 1988 Gates accepted the state folklorist position in Kentucky and Maida Owens (Bergeron) was appointed as a director of the Louisiana Folklife Program. After becoming the director, she managed both the Folklife Program and the Crafts Program.

The problem of the site selection for Louisiana Folklife Festival was highlighted at the beginning of 1989. For the 1989 Festival, Eunice was chosen as the festival site, but the whole concept and process of the site selection for the Festival was discussed at the Folklife Commission meetings. The Folklife Commission worked on developing a process for selecting future festival sites.

In February 1989 the Oversight Committee of the House Appropriations Committee recommended to the Legislature that the Folklife Commission be abolished because the Legislature was looking for program and/or budget cuts. The Louisiana Endowment for the Humanities proposed to cooperate with any efforts of the Folklife Program to support the Commission as a significant contributor to the Folklife Program.

Folklife in Education projects included the main concept that arts would become one of the basics of education through cooperative efforts by the Division of Arts and the Department of Education. These offices decided that folklife would be integrated into the four basic arts curricula: dance, music, theater, and visual arts. A draft of a Position Paper for Arts in Education for Louisiana School was available.

The Apprenticeship Program continued to develop. In 1987, the Folklife Program received an NEA grant for $27,800 to fund apprenticeships. Since 1983, 17 apprenticeships were funded. In addition, the Program applied for another $30,000 in grants.

Information from several folklife surveys, folklife festival participants, and previous years' research was computerized and made available to researchers for public folklife programs.

In February 1989, six years after its beginning, the Florida Parishes Folklife Survey was in its final phase at the printer's office. Co-published by the Center for Regional Studies. The Program planned to distribute it to libraries and made it readily available through the Division of the Arts.

The informal newsletter Folklife Program Update was started by Maida Owens (Bergeron) in 1989.

In March 1989 the procedure for selecting a festival site was implemented on through the Guidelines for Festival Site Selection and the importance of the 1990 festival and its potential role in Open House 1990 as well as the need to select the hosting community as soon as possible.

The organizers recommended that the Folklife Festival remain in Eunice, as Eunice had done a good job already hosting the Festival and had proven its commitment to the festival. Another reason that was discussed to keep the festival in Eunice was the National Park Service support of substantial money and in-kind services. In addition, National Park Service indicated a willingness to assist in having National Folk Festival at a future Eunice festival – that would be bringing substantial federal money into the project that other sites would not have access to. Also in Eunice necessary resources were already identified and networks established. The City of Eunice was a host of the Louisiana Folklife Festivals in 1988, 1989, and 1991.

As the festival demanded practically all of the director's attention, after re-evaluation, the Louisiana Folklife Commission's program's advisory board, recognized that the primary purpose of the Folklife Program was not to produce a festival, since remarkably few of the 400 festivals in Louisiana effectively presented traditional culture. The primary goal of the program was to educate the public and show communities the possibilities offered by folklife presentations. The Folklife Commission recommended that the annual festival be discontinued, the Department of Culture, Recreation and Tourism preferred to see it continue. It was decided to offer communities the opportunity to apply to host the festival for one year. The intended results were that different areas of the state would come to appreciate folklife, and more organization throughout the state would learn to present traditional cultures in appropriate ways. The role of the Louisiana Folklife Commission in this process was to review applications and recommend a site to the Department.

A new project developed by the Folklife Program was to design and implement the Storytelling

Program within Open House 1990, a tourism promotional campaign. The Folklife Program worked with the Office of Tourism. The narrative aspect of the Louisiana Folklife Festival was a model for organizing numerous storytelling sessions featuring local folk storytellers. The emphasis was on presenting local culture, history, legends, and personal narratives rather than the user of storytellers who have researched stories and developed presentation in a theatrical manner. To facilitate the development of storytelling presentations, nine regional coordinators were hired to help communities add them to planned public events.

Related to, but separate from, the Open House Storytelling Program was the Louisiana Storytelling Project which focused upon the fictional storytelling traditions of Louisiana. C. Renee Harvison directed the Project. The emphasis had been on folktales and legends, but other forms of narrative were collected as well, such as stories in folk music (Isleno decimas) and folk art (proverbial Czechoslovak wall hangings). 115 storytellers had been documented from both major and minor cultural and ethnic groups from around the state. It resulted finally in publishing a book Swapping Stories: Folktales from Louisiana.

Another major role of the Folklife Program director was to provide technical assistance regarding folklife grants from the Division of the Arts grants program.

In 1990 the host of the Louisiana Folklife Festival was the city of Kenner. It was a very good festival in terms of programming, but there were substantial problems with production and ineffective publicity that resulted in poor attendance. These problems were the direct result of moving the festival annually as each year a good portion of the time was spent redefining roles and responsibilities between State and Host City. So the Folklife Program recommended to hold a festival in one permanent site.

For 1991, the City of Eunice was chosen as a host of the Folklife Festival as it already proved successfully its ability to develop a good festival. Also the Festival Site Selection Procedure for 1992 festival was modified, 1993 Site Selection Procedures had been changed in order to determine a permanent site for the festival starting from 1993. The Louisiana Folklife Commission proposed to cooperate with the Department of Tourism to widely promote the festival and assured its publicity around the country as the highest quality folklife of Louisiana.
