BIOGRAPHICAL/HISTORICAL NOTE

Julian T. (Thaddeus) White was born on August 12, 1937 in Alexandria, Louisiana. He was the son of Reverend W. A. (Willie Augustus) White and Juliet Pappas White. Julian's grandfather, Reverend James Wesley White, baptized Julian at Rose of Sharon Missionary Baptist Church in Alexandria. After graduating from Peabody High School in Alexandria in 1955, Julian attended the University of Illinois in Urbana for his undergraduate studies in architecture. It was there that he met Loretta M. Jones, who was originally from Brockley, Massachusetts. The two married on June 23, 1961. After finishing his undergraduate studies in 1961, White began working at Southern University in Baton Rouge, Louisiana as an assistant professor of architecture. During this time, he also was a partner in the Hunt Thurman and Associates architectural firm in Baton Rouge. In 1964, he returned to the University of Illinois to begin his graduate studies in architecture and to work as an instructor and graduate teaching assistant. He also worked as a design architect for Roy D. Murphy & Associates in Urbana while he was a graduate student. After finishing his graduate studies in 1966, he returned to Southern University to work as an associate professor and as acting head of the architecture department there. Soon after that, he accepted a position as a visiting associate professor at the Tuskegee Institute in Tuskegee, Alabama from 1967 to 1968. After finishing his teaching position there, he moved to Houston, Texas to work as a design architect for Caudill, Rowlett, Scott (CRS) from 1968 to 1971. He then returned to Baton Rouge to accept a position at Louisiana State University (LSU) as an assistant professor of architecture. In accepting the position, he became the first African American faculty member at LSU. He became an associate professor in 1973 and formed the White & Kaple Architectural Association in 1978. He retired from LSU in 2004. After retiring, he continued to work as an architect until his death on July 19, 2011.

White participated in professional organizations throughout his career, holding several board, committee, and juror positions in the American Institute of Architects (AIA) at the local, regional, and national levels. He also served as vice chairman of the Louisiana State Architects Selection Board (1990-1991) and as president of the Louisiana State Board of Architectural Examiners (2006-2007). Many of his architectural pursuits and projects involved Louisiana Baptist churches and Louisiana schools.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Papers consist mainly of materials from Julian T. White's architectural projects throughout his professional career. While most of his projects were located in Louisiana, he also participated in projects outside of Louisiana, especially when he worked for CRS. Architectural project materials include office-type project files (for example, correspondence with clients, consultants, and contractors; transmittal sheets; bidding documents; project and planning notes; invoices; and project schedules), project manuals and specifications, a variety of architectural design and plan formats for project structures (whiteprints; blueprints; blueline prints; and photocopies), shop drawings and submittals (of various sizes), AIA project agreements, permit documents, and photographic items. Architectural designs and plans exist in a several different sizes: letter-size, legal-size, oversize, and rolled. These designs and plans can be found within the office-type project files (letter-size and legal-size designs and plans) and in separate storage containers (for oversize and rolled designs and plans). Architectural project materials are arranged by location, structure name, and then project (as White originally arranged the materials). Materials within most project file folders are arranged chronologically.

Additionally, papers include educational and teaching materials (from White's time as an instructor/professor at Southern University, the University of Illinois, and LSU) and personal papers. Personal papers include personal correspondence, resume and portfolio materials, sermons and speeches, promotional materials, printed materials, and other general notes, sketches, and designs.
